Aaron represents clients in matters involving government contracts and construction law. His experience encompasses bid protests, contract claim disputes, prime contractor-subcontractor conflicts, alternative dispute resolution, and appeals. Additionally, Aaron provides invaluable assistance to contractors by navigating requests for equitable adjustment, preparing contract claims, and conducting thorough reviews of prime contracts and subcontracts.

Moreover, Aaron offers comprehensive counsel in all aspects of government contracts and construction law, covering a wide spectrum of issues such as delays, changes, contract terminations, cost accounting and allowability, cost and price reasonableness, export controls, domestic preferences, suspension and debarment proceedings, government sanctions, and small business considerations. Furthermore, he adeptly conducts internal regulatory compliance investigations to ensure clients remain aligned with pertinent regulations and standards, including the False Claims Act.
